"1st Quarter" 2017 Newsletter

Team SMC

Hello and thanks for reading our (ahem!) "1st Quarter" 2017 Newsletter. There have been several changes since the beginning of the year, primarily my realization that there aren't eight days in a week or 30 hours in a day. In response to this great revelation, I started the process of splitting up my workload and building a team for my consulting practice.

So, there won't be any articles or references to 5S/Lean/Quality materials this time around... I want to dedicate this newsletter to the four people who work "behind the scenes" helping me keep my focus on serving you as a consultant, advisor, facilitator, and coach.

First, my wife Laura, a mixed media and fiber artist, is MY consultant and brainstorming teammate. Many times I find myself stuck in "left-brain mode", thinking about metrics and goals and results and all of those other logical/managerial functions. When I need a timeout to pull in the "right-brain" and whack me into process and relationships and "the big picture", Laura's there to bring me back into balance.

Maya Bouldry-Morrison is our transgender daughter and has the gift of blending Mom's right-brain art and process and Dad's left-brain logic and engineering. Maya graduated from the University of New Hampshire with an English degree and is a professional DJ and electronic musician. In between live shows and performances as Octo Octa, she occasionally supports me on-site for projects and audits, develops many of my spreadsheets, completes first-pass data analysis, identifies missing information, and drafts reports. She basically scoops up all of the raw data I collect on visits and works with me to put it all together into a meaningful document to send back to you.

Heather Vitella (Cover Crop Marketing) and I met through a state-wide volunteer organization several years ago. She helped me develop most of my original sales/marketing planning and she created and refined my website, www.s-morrison.com. The latest revisions were completed in January-February, and the site re-launched on March 8th, the same day as my LMC Annual Meeting Education Session on 5S/Lean.

The newest member of the team is Donna Hartley, whom I met through a mutual friend in town. Donna co-owned a transportation business for many years and is now on her own working with several local businesses as an office manager, bookkeeper, and administrative assistant. It has been great the last few weeks having Donna on board keeping "the back office" running smoothly while I'm traveling out to see you.

We'll catch up with new materials soon! Thanks again for your business (past, current, and/or future) and for your support.

Scott
